In 1940, EberhardFuhr and his family were told by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the FBI to go to the downtown post office and register as aliens.

During WWII the US government needed to ensure domestic security against dangerous elements in it's hemisphere. But it could have exercised greater vigilance to protect the liberties of those most vulnerable because of their ethnic ties to enemy nations. Some were dangerous, but too many were assumed guilty and never able to prove their innocence.

"Our family was one of thousands in Latin America caught in the far flung net cast by US authorities seeking 'the enemy' during World War II."

Hundreds of German and Italian seaman were the first internees at Fort Lincoln, Bismark, North Dakota. They had served on German and Italian commercial ships which were impounded in US ports when the war started in Europe in 1939.

After Anneliese Krauter's father was picked up by the FBI, her mother had no source of income and they went on welfare.

At Crystal City, Texas

Hitler came into power in 1933. He saved the country from economic devastation. He was their national hero at that time.

At the time the Germans were interned, Nazi hysteria was becoming very pervasive. When the neighborhood found out that Anneliese's father was picked up by the FBI, he was assumed to be a Nazi. The neighbors trashed their butcher shop.

Eberhard Fuhr met his wife, Barbara, while imprisoned at Crystal City Family Internment Camp. They married after their release.

"On March 23, 1943, while in class at Woodward High School, two FBI agents arrested me. I was 17. I was handcuffed. I never returned to school and was not allowed graduate two months later. I lost not only the belongings in my school locker, but my dignity."
